BUILDING EE IN SOCIETY

ST. PAUL 2006

North American Association for Environmental Education 35th Annual Conference - October 10-14, 2006

Environmental Education Conference Coming to St. Paul in October!

October in Saint Paul

Here in Minnesota, we know that in October there's no better place to be to see migrating birds on the Mississippi, experience the changing of the seasons, or host a gathering of environmental educators. Join us in the state capitol this fall for the 35th Annual North American Association for Environmental Education's Conference, from October 10-14th, where we'll gather to explore Environmental Education in Society.

The Conference

The focus of this international conference will be the unique role that environmental educators play in bringing together the many segments of society to create a more healthy, equitable, and sustainable world. Surrounded by our "Land of 10,000 Lakes", we'll come together to share our expertise, triumphs, tools, and passion for environmental education. Plan to join us for this gathering on the Mississippi River!

To celebrate this 35th Anniversary, here are 35 of the many reasons to attend this milestone conference:

35. St. Paul in the fall (no mosquitoes!) with the inspiration of the Mississippi River right out your front door
34. Video night with producer of the new PBS series Edens Lost and Found
33. A fabulous reception at the Minnesota History Museum with sustainable catering
32. An in-depth panel focusing on how society addresses complex water issues, featuring the Great Lakes region as a model for both problems and solutions
- 31-15: Sixteen uniquely Minnesota field trips
14. Hands-on opportunity to leave your mark in Minnesota through a local service project
- 13-10: Three amazing Keynotes: Frances Kuo, Cheryl Charles and Will Steger
9. A Research Symposium on how and why some EE programs work better than others, and how to document EE progress and success
- 8-6: Three hours on a riverboat during a dinner and dance cruisin' the headwaters
5. The chance to bid on dozens of auction items including your photo with live wolves
4. 300 concurrent sessions (something for everyone) interspersed with Coffee Breaks (where the real networking happens)
3. K-12 Educator Day - Saturday, October 14th
2. An Exhibit Fair with 65 spaces of stuff you want to see and buy, including an Authors Corner where you can meet writers and get your books signed

And the #1 reason to be here...the chance to hang with 1000 other Environmental Educators from around the world who share your passion for making the world a better place to live.

See you in St. Paul!
